REMOTE JOBS IN HUMAN SERVICES

In 2019, human services ranked seventh among Virtual Vocations' list of the 10 best industries for remote work. From 2018 to 2019, the number of available remote jobs within the human services sector increased by an impressive 128%.

Employment in human services related occupations is projected to grow 12% from 2019 to 2029. Human services sector growth will be much faster than the average for all occupations, equaling approximately 348,600 jobs added. (BLS, Community and Social Service Occupations)

Education minimums vary widely within the human services industry; however, most human services professions require a bachelor's degree. A master's degree and a professional license in good standing are also common requirements.

Human services is a multidisciplinary industry spanning career fields from education and case management to healthcare and community outreach. Human services offers fully virtual telehealth and coordination roles as well as some partial remote jobs including in-person work.
